

Alex Poppleton

I bring breadth and depth of experience that recognizes the importance of the legacy of thinkers and practitioners in OD, whilst understanding the pragmatic challenges facing us in imperfect organisations.

I have taught, practiced, consulted, hired, collaborated with, and worked alongside OD people in many guises inside and outside organisations. I would like to ensure that as a professional members organisation that we are:

- internally focused enough to ensure we are perpetually learning and challenging ourselves – without being destructively self-reflective
- externally focused enough to be really engaging with the new challenges in the world, and are able to lead the response for our profession – without being timid about our potential contribution
- discerning enough to find a path through both(!)

I would like to use the incredible collection of techniques and approaches OD has created to ensure we bring those to challenge ourselves and make a great contribution to the world.